

Justin Million's reading list for the Climenhage Project

"Cerberus". Louis Dudek, Irving Layton, Raymond Souster. Contact Press, Toronto, 1952.

"The Colour of the Times". Raymond Souster. The Ryerson Press, Toronto, 1964.

"Spring and All". William Carlos Williams. Contact Publishing Company, Paris, 1923.

"The Collected Works of Billy The Kid". Michael Ondaatje. House of Anansi Press, Toronto, 1970.

"The Double Hook". Sheila Watson. McClelland and Stewart, Toronto, 1959.

Watson said that her novel is "about how people are driven, how if they have no art, how if they have no tradition, how if they have no ritual, they are driven in one of two ways, either towards violence or towards insensibility – if they have no mediating rituals which manifest themselves in what I suppose we call art forms." She has explained that the "double hook" of her title refers to the idea "that when you fish for the glory you catch the darkness too. That if you hook twice the glory you hook twice the fear."

"Stilt Jack". John Thompson. House of Anansi Press, Toronto, 1978.

"Duration and Simultaneity". Henri Bergson. 1922.

Article from Brain Pickings about the 'invention' of zero:

Another Brain Pickings article about time, and our experience of it. A fairly new-agey overview that just skims the surface, but some interesting stuff. I feel like we've been talking a lot about time or time periods but not so much about the perceived passage of time, but I feel like John's work gets into that quite a bit, which is why I also included the Bergson article. Anyhow, here's the link to the Brain Pickings article:
